Support ServerDiscord BotBotHey, welcome to Discohook! The easiest way to personalise your Discord server. There's more info below, but you don't have to read it. If you're ready press Clear All in the top of the editor to get started. Discohook has a support server, if you need help feel free to join in and ask questions, suggest features, or just chat with the community. We also have complementary bot that may help out, featuring reaction roles and other utilities. Discohook is a free tool that allows you to personalise your server to make your server stand out from the crowd. The main way it does this is using webhooks, which allows services like Discohook to send any messages with embeds to your server. To get started with sending messages, you need a webhook URL, you can get one via the "Integrations" tab in your server's settings. If you're having issues creating a webhook, the bot can help you create one for you. Keep in mind that Discohook can't do automation yet, it only sends messages when you tell it to. If you are looking for an automatic feed or custom commands this isn't the right tool for you.Discohook has a bot as well, it's not strictly required to send messages it may be helpful to have it ready. Below is a small but incomplete overview of what the bot can do for you.Getting special formatting for mentions, channels, and emojiThe /format command of the bot can give you special formatting for use in Discord messages that lets you create mentions, tag channels, or use emoji ready to paste into the editor! There are manual ways of doing this, but it's very error prone. The bot will make sure you'll always get the right formatting for your needs.You can manage reaction roles with the bot using the /reaction-role command. The set-up process is very intuitive: type out /reaction-role create, paste a message link, select an emoji, and pick a role. Hit enter and you're done, your members can now react to any of your messages to pick their roles.Recover Discohook messages from your serverIt can also restore any message sent in your Discord server for you via the apps menu. To get started, right-click or long-press on any message in your server, press on apps, and then press Restore to Discohook. It'll send you a link that leads to the editor page containing the message you selected!Discohook can also grab images from profile pictures or emoji, manage your webhooks, and more. Invite the bot and use /help to learn about all the bot offers! Using SVGs Using HTML & CSS Conclusion Looking for a Discord.js bot? Check out Hans! Now it's open-sourced ! While dealing with sending messages with our Disc Bot, we can do it in multiple ways such as text, attachments and the most common way, embeds. One example could be something like the following command that will display the weather based on a location: Sometimes using the MessageEmbed class it is enough, but we may want to represent the data in a different layout/design: I was seeing several others bots making use of custom ways to show things like stats, users profiles, etc., but I wasn't sure how that can be done and I couldn't find any examples. Some ideas came to my mind and it was time to try things out :P The following examples are built on top of Discord.js, a Node.js wrapper to interact with the Discord API. For more information related to Discord.js and how you can start building your own BOT, you can follow along with this amazing series created by Daniel Shiffman. Using SVG When I first started looking into this, it came to my mind that having an SVG-to-PNG library could work pretty well since we can have the SVG in a template string and replace the placeholders with our data (user input, API calls, etc...) and then make use of MessageAttachment to attach the output. For the following SVG image, I was able to find a library that would take an SVG as a string value and return a buffer npm install svg-png-converter and then we could have a function to handle all the functionality, in this case we'll have it in its own file and we call it svgToPng.js (Discord only allows attachments of images as JPEG/PNG formats): // svgToPng.js const { MessageAttachment } = require('discord.js') const { svg2png } = require('svg-png-converter') module.exports = async (msg, name) => { const outputBuffer = await svg2png({ input:
